Program Coordination by Marianne Wheeler:

Welcome to Studies in American Language at San José State University! We are very happy you are here. I'll do my best to make your studies with us rewarding and comfortable. Please let me know how I can help you.

Here are your teachers and courses.

Speaking and Listening Strategies with Ursula Hamner

Build your confidence in listening and speaking in academic and professional situations. The ability to communicate ideas clearly is critical to success in today's academic classroom or business workplace. Lead and participate in a variety of small group discussions. Learn to state and ask for opinions, handle interruptions, define problems, and evaluate alternatives.

Building Fluency through Discussion of Cultural Topics with Kelly Robart:

Your instructor will lead you in class discussions of cultural topics based on regions in North America, California, the Bay Area, and San José. One of your assignments is to write a cultural journal to record observations during your stay in the US.

Presentation Skills with Danielle Pelletier:

Become a persuasive and confident speaker by structuring your presentation for maximum impact using visual aids effectively and handling questions comfortably.

You will learn how to structure, develop, and deliver effective presentations. You will review videos of your practice presentations and evaluate them.

Additional skills covered in the course include defining your audience, formulating an objective or purpose for your presentation, organizing your speech, improving eye contact, projection, articulation, pace, and body language, overcoming nervousness, anxiety, and distracting mannerisms, and using visuals to enhance your presentation and communicate your main points.

Accent Training with Sara Bakalian Wildman:

Discover what distinguishes your speech from native-born American pronunciation. You will have intonation and pronunciation exercises that will help you train your accent. As an added benefit, you will find that as your American accent develops, there will be an improvement in your listening comprehension.

Practical Presentation Exercise with Sally Teeple:

Your culminating project is a presentation of an investigatory task given to you to complete outside the classroom.

With the support and collaboration of your colleagues, your instructor will guide you through the steps from completing the investigation to delivering the presentation and managing the discussion. This final presentation will be held on Friday morning,
